THE Silver Bill only awaits the signature of the President to become a law.

CARPET-BAGGERS have given place to carpet-knights, whose weapons are lancets and not lances, and whose fields of action are the floors of legislative halls, not the green turf of the tourney.

PETERSBURG NEWS. We miss this excellent daily from our exchange list sadly. It was ably edited, well managed and courteously conducted and was always most welcome to us. We hope its suspension will be brief, and that Major Glass will soon take the helm again.

PINCHBACK in his speech at Nashville says "In Louisiana wherever a colored man has shown a disposition to be guided by his own convictions, an incessant warfare has been carried on against him both inside and outside the Republican party." This is equally true in North Carolina. The negro has suffered more here from the terrorism of his own party than from the intimidation of the whites. This last does not exist, but the warfare against him "inside the Republican party" has been incessant, cruel, often murderous. Pinchback adds, "the black people have lost all their manhood," which is true when they vote as they are bid and not as they wish.

BLAINE has a black eye already in his contest for the nomination. The report comes from Indianapolis, that on the minutes of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Railroad for December 16th, 1871, is an entry showing that $64,000 of the company's money found its way into the hands of some person who had no right to it. A resolution was introduced at a subsequent meeting of the Directory to investigate the matter. Mr. Rollins, Secretary of the Board went to the introducer, and told him he must withdraw the resolution because an investigation would involve Mr. Blaine and defeat re-election. "He got the money," and the resolution was withdrawn. Mr. Blaine denies it of course. But denials now-a-days amount to little when we know that greedy itching palms are always stretched out.

This possibly will not hurt him with his party who are able to stand a good deal of that species of scandal and thrive under a very heavy load of guilt.

THE FUTURE VOTE OF THE NEGRO.

The nice arrangement by which the negro vote was secured in a body to the Republican party bids fair to be broken up. "The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light," and in the acquisition of such an immense political force as the newly enfranchised slave on the rolls of suffrage, the Republicans showed a wisdom which might serve as a lesson to the Democrats if they had thought the negro vote worth contending for. In the scale of the ballot, it did weigh tremendously, and the weight was fully recognized. But we will candidly admit, what perhaps under changed conditions the Republicans hereafter will admit, that the late slave was hardly a fit subject of contention as a political factor. The Democrats were ready to yield almost anything except the right of suffrage to the newly enfranchised slaves. The Republicans looking only to political ascendancy were less squeamish and not only received them but forced the ballot upon them.

It is safe to say that the reluctance of the Democrats has been fully justified by events. Nearly all the troubles at the South have arisen from the solid negro vote cast in one scale. That vote has sustained the carpet-bagger and sealawag in all their violations of law, liberty and honesty, and has enabled them to fasten a yoke on the South which is only being slowly broken. It was only by the practical effects of the unscrupulous and selfish wickedness of these parasites that a public sense has been roused against them. The turn of the miserable instruments of their schemes is now coming. They begin to realize the iniquity practiced upon them. They begin to see the delusion that lay upon them. They experience the hollowness of the friendship and the promises of their false protectors.

When these are fully realized, then the negro will act for himself, and then will come to an end a system which is false and ruinous. The political equality of the races being recognized and secured, reason would teach that they should be exercised freely and without control or restraint. All the provisions of the Enforcement Act to secure the free exercise of the right of the negro to vote as he pleases would never have been half so efficient as the breaking down of the mastership which Republican leaders have exercised over the negro voters, or the dissolution of those obligations imposed by secret societies or the force of custom. So long as the negro is herded or voted in a body not as he will but as he is bid, so long will the Democrats stand justified in their original opposition to extending to them the right of suffrage. So long as it is done, so long will race distinction stand as an impassable barrier and a black line of hostility. When the negro understands that suffrage is a free-man's right, the exercise of his own freedom of will and thought, then this barrier will be broken down, and then will harmonious action be introduced.

These things come slowly, but we think, surely. Leading negroes begin to see the deception practiced upon them, and they begin to turn upon their deceivers. Fred Douglas, Pinchback and Bruce, all leaders of their race, are ready to throw off the yoke. The leading negroes in North Carolina are less pliant than they were. And it may happen—we do not predict it—that the Republican party in North Carolina may even be shorn of the strength which is its sole reliance in the coming Presidential election.

THE EMPEROR OF BRAZIL.

The ruler of the largest and most populous and productive region of South America is near our shores and will be the guest of the United States for some months to come. He comes as plain Senhor Alcantara, but he is Emperor nevertheless, and cannot conceal his consequence under an incognito. Of course he will be received with a splendor never before witnessed here, for he is a veritable ruler Emperor, and Emperors will dazzle republican eyes.

But Dom Pedro is something more than an Emperor—he is a man of thought and action, and has used imperial power to wise purpose. The development of Brazil under his rule has been prodigious as compared with previous progression and the usual slow-moving policy of Portuguese and Spanish rule. He has discarded the system of exclusiveness which had shut up his empire against the foreign world as closely as was ever China or Japan. He has invited immigration and has given every facility to colonization. He has thrown open his ports to trade, and removed many onerous restrictions on commerce. Greater than all, he has opened up the navigation of the Amazon to the shipping of the whole world, and brought the magnificent and fabulously productive region watered by it and its tributaries to the knowledge of mankind. Before him, it was hermetically sealed except to special permit. He has built railroads, and thus extended the area of interior trade, and he has stimulated agriculture by giving its products access to market. He has been liberal in the support of education, he has extended increased toleration, to religion and he has shown his philanthropy by the prospective abolition of slavery, too wise and humane to bring it about by one stroke of the pen.

Altogether, Dom Pedro is a great man, pronounced the greatest of living rulers. He visits this country, it is to be hoped, to learn no new lessons in the science of government. If he has come to a bad school, but he can acquire many new ideas of material progress, and will go back to his empire qualified still farther to advance the progress of improvement.

He is now fifty-one years of age. He is accompanied by his wife and a large and brilliant suite.

The Life of Mr. A. T. Stewart.

Whether Alexander Turney Stewart was born in the province of Ulster, Antrim county, about four miles from Belfast, in Ireland, October 17, 1802, or in the county of Tyrone, in 1795, is a question upon which biographers disagree. The Appletons say that he was born in 1802. A volume entitled "Successful Men," and published merely for private circulation, dates his birth seven years earlier. Mr. Stewart's ancestors were natives of Scotland, and he inherited the spirit and latent power of the Scotch Irish race that had dominated in the north of Ireland for two centuries. At eight years of age he was an orphan, and was cared for by his grandfather, who, with a view of educating him for the Protestant Church, sent him to Trinity College in Dublin, but he was withdrawn from that institution after the death of his grandfather. He came to America in 1818 to seek his fortune. It has often been said that he arrived in New York penniless and without friends, but this is doubted by many who were intimately acquainted with him.

Mr. Stewart's letters of introduction from members of the Society of Friends in Ireland to wealthy merchants of that society in New York gave him access to the best circles, and therein his pleasing address and no mean scholarship made him a favorite. He taught a number of pupils at 59 Broad street, and although he was not a teacher, he established himself as a dry goods merchant in the frame building at Broadway and Chambers street. His cash capital was between twelve and fifteen hundred dollars. His store was small, being only twenty-two feet by thirty deep, and was next door to the establishment of the then famous Bonafant, who kept the most frequented variety store of the day.

It was at this time that he married Miss Cornelia Clapp, who survived him, and who lived in the same small room over the store, and the wife took care of the domestic arrangements while the husband attended to his business. Stewart, however, was not a domestic man, and he was not a man of much advantage but his own unaided determination to succeed. Mr. Stewart started boldly on what proved the real trial to fortune. No young man could have worked harder than he. From fourteen to eighteen hours every day he gave to his business. He was his own bookkeeper, salesman and porter. He kept a small stock of goods, which he purchased for cash, chiefly.

At the auction sales Mr. Stewart was a regular attendant at these sales, and his purchases were invariably samples. He had a good eye for a bargain, and after the business of the day was over he and his wife carefully assorted the sample lots and brought order out of confusion. Every article was carefully examined, gloves were redressed and smoothed out, lace pressed free from the creases that careless blunders had twisted them and the goods were made up as if they had never been handled. Every article was thus restored to its original excellence. The goods were then arranged in their proper places on the shelves of the store, and being offered at a lower price than that charged by other retail dealers in the city, they had a ready sale. Even at the low price the profit was great. As the goods were purchased for a mere trifle, Mr. Stewart continued his business in this way, acquiring every day a larger and more profitable trade. It is said that when he first started in business, he knew so little of the details that he was sometimes sorely embarrassed by trifles. Once, it is said, he accosted the late William Beecher, from whom he bought many goods as follows:

"Mr. Beecher, a lady came into my store to-day and asked me to show her some hose. I did not know what she meant. I told her I did not keep the article. What did she want?"

Mr. Beecher laughingly showed him a pair of stockings, and the young man was convinced of his own ignorance. While yet in his struggles in his little store, Mr. Stewart found himself called upon to make arrangements to pay a note that would soon become due. He had neither the money nor the friends from whom he wished to borrow. He marked down every article in his store far below the wholesale price. This he did in a large quantity of handbills printed, announcing the sale of his entire stock of goods below cost to be effected within a given time. He scattered these handbills all over New York, and it was not long before purchasers began to flock to his store. They found the best goods in the market at a lower price than they had ever before been offered for in New York, and every one sent his friends to avail themselves of the opportunity. The little Broadway store was filled all day, and long before the expiration of the period fixed for the duration of the sale Mr. Stewart's shelves were empty and his treasury was full. He paid his note and laid in a fresh stock of goods. He was fortunate in his purchases at this time. The market was extremely dull and money was scarce. The energy, industry, patience, and business tact displayed by Mr. Stewart in these first years of his commercial life yielded their sure reward, and in 1828 his little store was no longer large enough for the large and fashionable trade that had come to him.

THE GROWING TRADESMAN.

Three new stores had just been erected in Broadway and Chambers streets, and he leased the smallest of them and moved into it. It was a most desirable location, three stories in height and with a deep frontage on Broadway to keep a larger and more attractive stock of goods, and his business was greatly benefited by the change. After four years in this store he moved in 1832 to a larger store in Broadway between Murray and Warren streets. Soon after occupying it he was compelled by the growth of his business to add twenty feet to the depth of the store, and in 1837 another story was added, and in 1837 a fifth story. His trade was now with the wealthy and fashionable class of the city, and he had accumulated a large and early difficulties and laid the foundation of a magnificent fortune.

The great crisis of 1837 found Mr. Stewart prospering and rising high, and in that terrible financial storm, while other men were becoming bankrupt, he was coining money. He always watched the market closely so that he might profit by every sudden change in it. He marked down all his goods as low as possible and began to "sell at cost." Everybody complained of hard times, and all were glad to avail themselves of "Stewart's bargains." In this way he carried on a retail cash trade of four thousand dollars a day in that fearful crisis. Other merchants were compelled to send their goods to auction to be sold for what they might bring, and Mr. Stewart attended all their auctions regularly, purchasing the goods thus offered. These he rapidly sold, realizing an average profit of forty per cent. It is said that he purchased $50,000 worth of silks in this way, and sold the whole lot at a profit of $2,750,000. To this transaction, he made a fortune in that crisis.

When Mr. Stewart opened his little store, John Jacob Astor was worth millions, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, as captain for Thomas Gibbons, had been six years in the steamboat business. In 1843 he built the large marble store at Broadway and Chambers street, the site of the old Hotel, a place which was a fashionable resort about forty years ago. Stewart's New York palace, as it was called, was the marvel of the time. From 1848 his business grew rapidly, and it grew until it became enormous. In some branches he had almost a monopoly. Buying in large quantities, and always for cash, he had great advantages in the foreign market, and for a long time the English, French and German manufacturers made concessions to him that no other man could obtain. He was a man of great foresight, and he foresaw and prepared for the up-and-down movement by leasing the land bounded by Ninth and Tenth streets and Broadway and Fourth avenue. It is part of the old Rector's house, and he had under Sallo's drug store. On these lots, covering an area of two and one-quarter acres he erected his strong iron retail store at a cost of $2,750,000. To this establishment, in 1862, Mr. Stewart removed his retail business, and from that time the down-town store was given to wholesale trade. Mr. Stewart's up-town store is the largest of the kind in the world. There is nothing that at all approaches it in either London or Paris. It has eight stories, two below and six above ground, each covering an area of two and one-quarter acres, thus making a total of eighteen acres devoted to retail dry goods purposes. It requires 520-horse power to heat the vast store, run the elevators, work the sewing machines. There are about two thousand employees under pay, and the disbursement for running expenses are over $1,000,000 a year. The wholesale and retail establishments combined have sold goods valued at $50,000,000 in one year.

The firm of A. T. Stewart & Co. has branch houses in Boston, Philadelphia, Paris, Lyons, France, Manchester, England, Braintree, Nottingham, Belfast, Glasgow, Berlin, and Chemnitz.

REFORMING THE RETAIL TRADE.

Mr. Stewart was a strictly just, but not a generous man in his dealings. He always kept his own word scrupulously, and required others to do the same. If he promised to pay a dollar, he paid a dollar, and if a man promised him a dollar, nothing less than a dollar would he accept. Hence he got the reputation of being hard and exacting, and consequently was rather unpopular. He was also a strictly faithful man. He never allowed a dishonest dealer to do business in his employ to tell them. The foundation of his business success was the reputation, which is established, gained at an early day, for dealing honestly and fairly with his customers. He was not a man to be taken in, and then making no deviations. When he first opened his store it was the custom of the day for the dealer to offer their merchandise at a low price, and then making no deviations. When he first opened his store it was the custom of the day for the dealer to offer their merchandise at a low price, and then making no deviations. When he first opened his store it was the custom of the day for the dealer to offer their merchandise at a low price, and then making no deviations.

London Stock Exchange—Snow Storm in England.

LONDON, April 13.—The Stock Exchange today is quiet and firmer but inactive. To-morrow and Monday next will be complete holiday in London, and Friday, Saturday and Monday will be similarly observed in Liverpool.

A sharp gale prevailed this morning, attended with rain and snow. The weather is cold. A dispatch from Nottingham says seven inches of snow had fallen there. In North Wales the ground is covered to the depth of nine inches. At Sheffield it is now nearly a foot deep, which is the heaviest fall of the winter. Vegetation is suffering greatly. At Dublin a foot of snow fell last night.

South Carolina Republican Convention.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The Republican convention gathered here at night session. Governor Chamberlain was elected delegate to Cincinnati. The convention after bitter struggle, a resolution offering Governor Chamberlain was adopted, leaving the delegates wholly free and untrammelled. A resolution thanking Governor Chamberlain for the manner in which he has administered the Government of South Carolina, urging him to go forward in the path of reform and good principles and assuring him of support of all true Republicans was defeated by a two third vote.

Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The Senate is considering the bill for calendar, which was not objected to.

The Committee on Elections heard the argument in the case of Butts vs. Mackey, from South Carolina, and will hear further argument on Monday.

The case of Spencer vs. Morrey, from Louisiana, will probably not be decided until Wednesday.

Ex-Assistant Post Master General Roubt appeared before the Post Office Committee and was discharged from connection with the crooked practices developed in the Sawyer & Hinds mail contract investigation.

Washington Items.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Senator Sargent, of California, must go before the Committee on Naval Expenditures to explain charges from him to Secretary Robeson.

Treasury Agent Madge, in his testimony, says he made some suggestions to Governor Stephens and Harrington about Columbus Alexander's affair previous to the safe burglary. Shepherd told him to leave the whole thing to Harrington who knew all about it and would manage it.

The Paris Bourne.

PARIS, April 13.—The Messenger de Paris discussing yesterday's panic on the Bourse says, "We were apprehensive of the immediate outbreak of an European war, in which we would be fatally involved, the market could not more utterly have lost its self-control."

The Bosnian Insurgents.

VIENNA, April 13.—The Bosnian Insurgents have dispersed a column of 2,500 men each, which are moving in the direction of Banjaluka. The Roman Catholics who have hitherto abstained from action are now joining the Insurgents.

Confirmation—Haskins, Collector of Customs of Tappanhook District, Va.

The Committee on Appropriations have directed their chairman, Mr. Randall, to authorize all legislation with appropriation bills until disposed of.

The bill reported by Mr. Wright from the Senate Judiciary Committee to-day relative to certain offenses and their punishment, provides that if, in any place under the jurisdiction of the United States except the District of Columbia, any offense is committed, which is not prohibited by or the punishment thereof is not specially provided for by the United States Law, such offense shall receive the same punishment as the local laws of the State or Territory now in force provide for the like offense, if committed within their jurisdiction, and no repeal of such State or Territory shall affect any prosecution or liability for such offense in any U. S. Court.

Funeral of A. T. Stewart.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Great crowds collected at an early hour in the neighborhood of the residence of the late A. T. Stewart to witness the funeral procession. At 11 o'clock the Avenue spectators were stationed in the windows and on the steps of houses. The vast assemblage was very orderly and subdued. A small police force was in front of the residence of the deceased who kept back the crowd, only allowing those to enter the dwelling who were provided with tickets of admission.

The funeral procession started from Mr. Stewart's house about 11:30 a. m. The body lay in state all the morning and was viewed by fully four thousand people. It was supported on a bed of flowers nearly five feet high. The other floral decorations were superb and could hardly be excelled in magnificence.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Led by the buzzards. Winston Sentinel: Some boys in Surry county, attracted to the spot by the presence of buzzards, found the corpse of an infant wrapped in an old bed quilt, but so much decayed that it was impossible to tell whether it was a white or colored child.

Which was better. Murfreesboro Enquirer: At the death of an old colored individual, the North Carolina State two coffins were made by different parties. There was a discussion as to what disposition should be made with one of them, when the deceased, dead.

Deputy Sheriff. Durham Herald: James H. Blackner has been appointed deputy sheriff for this portion of Orange county. We understand Mr. B. has had repeated applications to accept the position, but has always refused until now, being persuaded by friends. His bondsmen are W. T. Blackwell and J. S. Carr, Esqrs.

Polkton improving. Ansonian: Our enterprising townsman, Mr. J. J. Austin, is erecting a large and handsome two story building on Polkton street, which will be completed in a credit to our town. The upper story, is constructed with a view of its being accepted as a Grange and Masonic Hall and the first floor for store room. It will be well adapted to these purposes.

A lady attacked on the street by a cow. Greensboro Patriot: A wicked cow attacked Mrs. Rankin as she was passing along Greene street near West Market last Thursday, knocking her down, trampling her and killing her had it not been for the interference of passers by. As it was the lady was considerably injured. There are several of these pugnacious cows within the city limits, and they are permitted to run at large like pet animals.

A colored orator. Greensboro Patriot: E. W. Carter, of Mississippi, a colored man, will address his people at the Court House Tuesday night on topics of interest to the race. He invites their attendance, not a political harangue, but to listen to something of interest to them all. He is a lawyer by profession, practicing in the courts of Pickens, Yazoo City, and Jackson; is said to have a good reputation as a public speaker.

Shot his wife. Blue Ridge Blade: A man by the name of McGwire, a wagon maker, living in Hickory, shot his wife yesterday morning and bore an inscription on a plate of solid gold, with gold handles and heavy gold fringe three inches deep all around it. The clock was lined with white silk. The body was dressed in a suit of black cloth. Floral gifts were presented by Mrs. General Dix, Robert W. Stewart and others. Bishop Potter and Rev. S. H. Ford, and the Rev. J. H. Ford, of the house before the body was lifted. After this service the employees were allowed to enter and take a last look at the deceased, they passed at the rate of forty-five to the minute, but at this rate it took nearly an hour and a half to get through. The coffin was then lifted and the procession moved down Fifth Avenue to Tenth street and across the latter to the funeral home. The cortege numbered two hundred carriages and extended a long distance. Preparations for the funeral have been commenced early in the morning. The floral tributes there were magnificent. The catafalque was placed at the lower end of the main aisle and consisted of a bed of flowers. Large crowds of ticket-holders were outside clamoring for admission. It required the utmost efforts of a strong police force to restrain them. Delegations from the Merchants' National Bank and the Union League Club were present at the church.

The Black Friday Case.

NEW YORK, April 13.—In the suit of Taylor against Gold and others, known as the Black Friday Case, Judge Barnard granted the motion of defendants counsel to dismiss the complaint on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence of a contract, and that the transaction was in violation of the statute of frauds. An allowance of two per cent was granted to the defendants' counsel. A stay was also granted to prepare an appeal.

Gen. Santa Anna in his Old Age.

He lives in the City of Mexico, in a three-story house of two stories, with courts of not more than twenty feet square, the pavements out of repair, the whole telling the story of poverty.

He was seated upon a much-worn sofa, at end of a smart-appearing Mexican of middle age, and rose, with some difficulty, in answering him. He complained considerably of his wretched leg, and also of blindness.

He is an old man of eighty years, very decrepit, in full command of his faculties; has a good head and face, not unlike the pictures of Humboldt in old age, with broad temples and an abrupt, square nose, and, at one time, good eyes. He had little to say, but appeared pleased at our visit; and, as we told him of the four or five general officers of the Mexican army still living, he listened with interest, but showed no special recognition until the name of Pilo was mentioned, whom he remembered perfectly.

General Santa Anna was the picture of a beautiful woman in her fullness of youth and loveliness. This was his wife when both led the fortunes of Mexico. As we passed out the court, our attention was called to the figure of a woman of fifty in the window opposite, in plain dress, and devoid of any interesting attribute. This was she who picture had so interested us, Mrs. General Santa Anna.

At the grand illumination in honor of the Prince of Wales in Madrid many about the city took occasion to advertise liberally. One man displayed the royal motto: "God preserve the Prince of Wales, direct importer of marmalade, jams, English stores, wine, spirits, and boots and shoes."

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

DEAR SIR—Your medicines, Golden Medical Discovery, Dr. Pierce's Catarrh Remedy, have proved of the greatest service to me. Six months ago no one thought that I could possibly live longer. I had a complication of diseases, scrofula, manifesting itself in eruptions and great blotches on my head that made such sores that I could not have my hair combed without causing me much suffering; also causing swollen glands, tonsils enlarged, enlarged "thick neck," and large and numerous boils. I also suffered from a terrible catarrh of the bladder, and in fact was so diseased that life was a burden to me. I had tried many doctors with no result. I finally procured covers within the city limits, and they are permitted to run at large like pet animals.
